Cover letter

I have about 15 years experience in java development and system administration (mostly linux/unix) and I always worked in corporate and enterprise environments where I learned strong methodologies to be applied in complex projects.

I love information technology in every aspect: I am a software developer, a system administrator and if needed DBA.

I always study and watch technological advances to better understand if they can fit in my current working projects: I consider technology not a simple toy but a medium to get results using the right tool for the right job.

I really love to work with people: in these days nobody alone can succeed and team-building and team management are a must. In the web age, communities are a strong plus for every emerging technology and I think I can help you to build them.

I am fluent in english as I studied for some weeks in Ireland, U.S.A. and Canada. I practice english every day as the most interesting technologies (and all related technology news) are first covered in english.

After many years working for big corporations (banks and telcos) and working on (un-personal) big projects it is time to move on and do what I really enjoy (and you offer as developer evangelist): work on open source technologies, meet people, help others to learn, grow together as we share a vision. I believe I can contribute knowledge and help you build the strong community you need to grow further.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely

Piero Ottuzzi
